

Katherine Storer

Supply Chain Executive

Katherine is the Chief Supply Chain Officer at Berlin Packaging, the world's largest hybrid packaging supplier. She is responsible for all facets of Berlin North America's Supply Chain strategy & execution, including Sourcing, Planning, Custom Tooling, Logistics, and Quality. In 2021, she was selected as one of Supply & Demand Chain Executive's Women in Supply Chain.

Before joining Berlin Packaging in 2019, Katherine spent more than a decade at the Procter & Gamble Company and served as an Adjunct Professor at the University of Cincinnati. In her various P&G roles, she led globally-distributed teams, drove P&G Purchases' Digital Transformation, and co-created the Relationship Management trainings, which P&G Purchases still uses.

Katherine earned her Master of Business Administration degree from the University of Chicago Booth School of Business and her Bachelor's Degree in Business Management & Psychology from Anderson University.

Katherine and her husband, Tim, have been married since 2008 and share a passion for equipping future leaders. In their early years as a married couple, they traveled to 37 countries and 6 of the 7 continents. Now living in Chicago with their 2 young children, they enjoy fostering a love for learning and exploring.
