

Marek Felskowski

Civil Engineer & Personal Development Coach

After graduating with honors in structural engineering, Marek worked as a structural designer in Angola, southern Africa from 2013 to 2014.

Given an opportunity to work as a recruiter for his company, he found that he enjoyed public speaking and interacting with students so much that he made a radical decision to retrain completely. He returned to Poland and undertook two years of training to learn how to help students develop and grow in areas like leadership, self-awareness, and finding purpose in life. During this time he had personal interactions with thousands of people, organizing numerous courses, workshops, seminars, camps, and conferences. After 8 years of experience, he moved to the Middle East to help students there.

Marek has been married since 2015 and has three sons. His interests include reading, hiking, psychology, traveling, and following the development of Poland's expressway network.
