Todd Geist

Leadership Lecturer, Finance Executive

Todd is the founder and President of Global Leadership Partners, a non-profit that provides world-class leadership training in countries worldwide. GLP's mission is to equip aspiring leaders via training which promotes a values-based, purpose-driven approach to leadership. Since 2010, he and his team have trained tens of thousands of participants.

Todd formerly served as a Senior Finance Director for Procter & Gamble. During his 30-year career, he held positions in Internal Audit, Financial Analysis, Supply Chain Financial Management, Forecasting, and Strategic Planning - mostly in the Health & Beauty Care segments. In his last 17 years, he held global positions that provided extensive international experience.

In his final role at P&G, Todd oversaw Leadership Development for the global Finance & Accounting organization. During this time, he refined his skills as a leadership trainer and helped P&G maintain its status as one of the top developers of leaders worldwide. He retired from P&G in 2016, before founding GLP the following year.

He earned his bachelor's degree in Business Administration and Accounting from Cedarville University in Cedarville, Ohio.

Todd is married and has two adult children. His interests include fitness, hiking, and travel. His travels have taken him to more than 90 countries.
