

James Mary

Master Educator/Facilitator,
Leadership Coach, Consultant

James has spent 35 years working in organizational and leadership development roles in many industries from finance to non-profit to healthcare. During his career, he has been a regional director leading teams in several countries. His work on 3 continents has focused on developing leaders at all levels of an organization.

Currently based in Cincinnati, Ohio, James works primarily with one of the leading pediatric hospitals in the world. At Cincinnati Children's Hospital, he serves in the Leadership Academy, where he uses his skills, energy, and passion to educate leaders of hospitals from around the world in leading Quality Improvement efforts. He loves to use games and sports to teach lessons in leadership and to engage his audiences. He also coaches business executives and facilitates team-building initiatives with their organizations. He holds certifications in leadership coaching and facilitation. He has a passion for mentoring leaders to help them maximize their opportunities professionally and personally.

James is married to Nancy (since 1988) and has 3 children. He has a bachelor's in Psychology from the University of Georgia and a master's in Human Resource Development from Xavier University.
