

Michael Wright

Visionary, Collaborator, Leader

Michael's experience encompasses sales, marketing, product development, and start-up initiatives with global organizations including Casio, Inc. & Hobart. He also has experience in small business management, branding, and expansion with global brands such as Micros and Panasonic and customers like Marriott, Procter & Gamble, and Subway. He has also collaborated with local and international non-profit organizations.

While living in Amsterdam, Mike learned to use "social capital" providing free business consulting to entrepreneurs in exchange for free office space in the heart of the city. On Amsterdam University campuses, he also volunteered considerable time conducting surveys, listening to life experiences, and sharing ideas with students on developing their life goals and purpose.

Mike has a bachelor's degree from Olivet and a master's degree from Trinity International University. He has co-authored two books, taught graduate level courses in the U.S., and mentored individuals in the Netherlands, Uganda, and Uruguay.

Mike and his wife, Tammy, have two daughters and four grandchildren. His interests include hiking, working out, biking, writing, and international travel.
