

Mike Hughes

Operations & Supply Chain Executive

Mike served as an Operations and Supply Chain Manager for Procter & Gamble. During his 32-year career, he held numerous positions, including Operations Manager, Category Supply Manager, Supply Chain Design Manager, and Merger, Acquisition, and Divestiture Manager – mostly in P&G’s Global Personal Health Care business unit.

Within P&G, Mike has led large organizations, such as the worldwide Metamucil manufacturing plant, as well as complex deals such as the P&G/Teva partnership where both companies contributed brands, technology, systems, and people to create a new joint venture to develop and market over-the-counter medicines around the world.

Mike earned his bachelor’s degree in Mechanical Engineering with a minor in Business Administration from Marquette University in Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

Mike is married and has two grown children. His interests include brewing beer, playing volleyball, biking, hiking, travel with family, and leadership development. He has a passion for the topic of developing, integrating, and improving culture and operations.
