

Todd Geist

Leadership Lecturer, Finance Executive

Todd is founder and President of Global Leadership Partners, a non-profit which provides world-class leadership training internationally. GLP's mission is to equip aspiring leaders via training which promotes a values-based, purpose-driven approach to leadership. Since 2010, he has delivered hundreds of lectures to thousands of participants.

Todd formerly served as a Senior Finance Manager for Procter & Gamble. During his 30-year career, he held positions in Internal Audit, Financial Analysis, Supply Chain Financial Management, Forecasting, and Strategic Planning - mostly in the Health & Beauty Care segments. In his last 17 years, he held global positions which provided extensive international experience.

In his final role at P&G, Todd oversaw Leadership Development for the global Finance & Accounting organization. During this time, he refined his skills as a leadership trainer and helped P&G maintain its status as one of the top developers of leaders world-wide. He retired in 2016.

Todd earned his bachelor's degree in Business Administration and Accounting from Cedarville University in Cedarville, Ohio.

Todd is married and has two university-aged children. His interests include fitness, hiking, and travel. He has visited more than 60 countries and, since living in Bulgaria with his family for a year, has a special interest in Eastern Europe.
