

Tom Rockwood

Chief Operations Officer, Supply Chain Professional

Tom is Chief Operations Officer for the Aruna Project, a non-profit helping sexually exploited women in India. He is also Manager of Material Handling/Customer Service for Natorp's Nursery Outlet, which grows and sells more than 1 million plants annually.

Tom spent 30 years working for Procter & Gamble with positions in Product Supply, Supply Chain Operations, and Customer Business Development. His career included roles such as Manufacturing Management, Process Improvement, Supply Chain Management/Improvement, Custom Package Design/Project Team Leadership, External Management of Transportation Supply, North American Supply Chain Go-To-Market Programs Owner and Supply Chain Manager on several Customer Teams, representing 20 percent of P&G's North American sales.

Since leaving P&G in 2009, Tom focused his initial experience and passions in assisting non-profits/para-churches in event/financial management and strategy development, then as an Adjunct Instructor of Supply Chain Management at the University of Cincinnati.

Tom is married to Susan (since 1979) and has three married children, as well as 9 grandchildren (including three foster-grandchildren). His interests include landscaping and woodworking. He has a degree in Management Engineering from Worcester Polytechnic Institute.

