

Caroline Mbanacho Oduol

Founder, Author,
Lead Operational Controllership Analyst

Caroline is a Lead Controllership Analyst with a division of General Electric. Throughout her 12-year career in General Electric, she has held multiple positions with various duties: accounting systems, financial reporting, optimizing processes, and training. She led teams in Angola, South Africa, Nigeria, North America, and Kenya.

Before General Electric, Caroline worked for ExxonMobil as the Accounting Coordinator of the leading oil company provider based in Kenya. She held multiple positions: Accounts Payable, Fixed Assets, Internal Accounting Controls, Treasury, and Peer Trainer.

She also founded Imaniworks, a limited company that promotes human rights through advocacy and education. Her leadership style and reputation are based on integrity, excellence, and truth.

She holds a Master in Business Administration and a bachelor's degree in Economics from the University of Nairobi. She is a Certified Public Accountant (CPA(k)) from Strathmore University and a member of the Institute of Certified Public Accountants of Kenya (ICPAK).

Caroline and her husband, Kenny, live in the Cincinnati, Ohio area. They enjoy reading, worldwide travel & adventures, and cross-cultural experiences.

