

Charley Eberhard

Engineering Manager

Charley is a retired Director of Engineering at Procter and Gamble. Throughout his 31-year career with P&G, he served in a variety of areas including engineering executions, technology licensing, and alternative energy technical leadership. During the past 10 years, he has focused on leading technical teams in the development and execution of complex capital projects. In this capacity, he has led projects in Central Europe, the UK, and the US.

Charley earned his bachelor's degree in Mechanical Engineering from the University of Michigan and a master's degree in Aerospace Engineering from the University of Cincinnati. He began his career at General Electric Aircraft Engines as a gas turbine design engineer before working for P&G.

He is married and has two grown children. His interests include tennis, reading, and technology. After several moves in recent years between the UK, Ohio and Virginia, he and his wife, Kim, now live in North Carolina.

