

Linda Grinalds

Innovator, Initiator, and Motivator

Linda is a small business owner and community leader.

For the past 8 years, she has served as Vice President and Trustee on the National Board of Directors for a 50,000-member nonprofit dedicated to character and leadership development. She has also spent more than 25 years teaching and training youth while home-educating her three sons.

Her leadership extends into athletics and academics. A High School Athletic Hall of Fame inductee, Linda founded Cincinnati's Queen City Golf Program and developed and coached Speaking of Science, an award-winning high school STEM competition team.

Professionally, she has held marketing roles with Fortune 500 companies, such as PepsiCo, GSK Pharmaceuticals, and Macy's Liberty House of Hawaii.

Linda earned an honors degree in English from Harvard University, where she played Varsity Women's Soccer and served as Chair and President of Harvard Student Agencies, a not-for-profit student-managed corporation.

She and her husband, Southy, reside in Cincinnati, Ohio. They have also lived in Hawaii, Japan, and New Hampshire.
